Human development Overview of the main (organizational) paradigms

Levels of Consciousness

Self-management basics

Decision making governance systems

► Hierarchy

- Command and control
- Focus: organizing people
- Decisions made depending on level
- Intelligent design

► Self-organization

- Distributed authority
- Focus: organizing work
- Decisions made depending on role
- Evolutionary design

Empowerment Mechanics

changes to rules

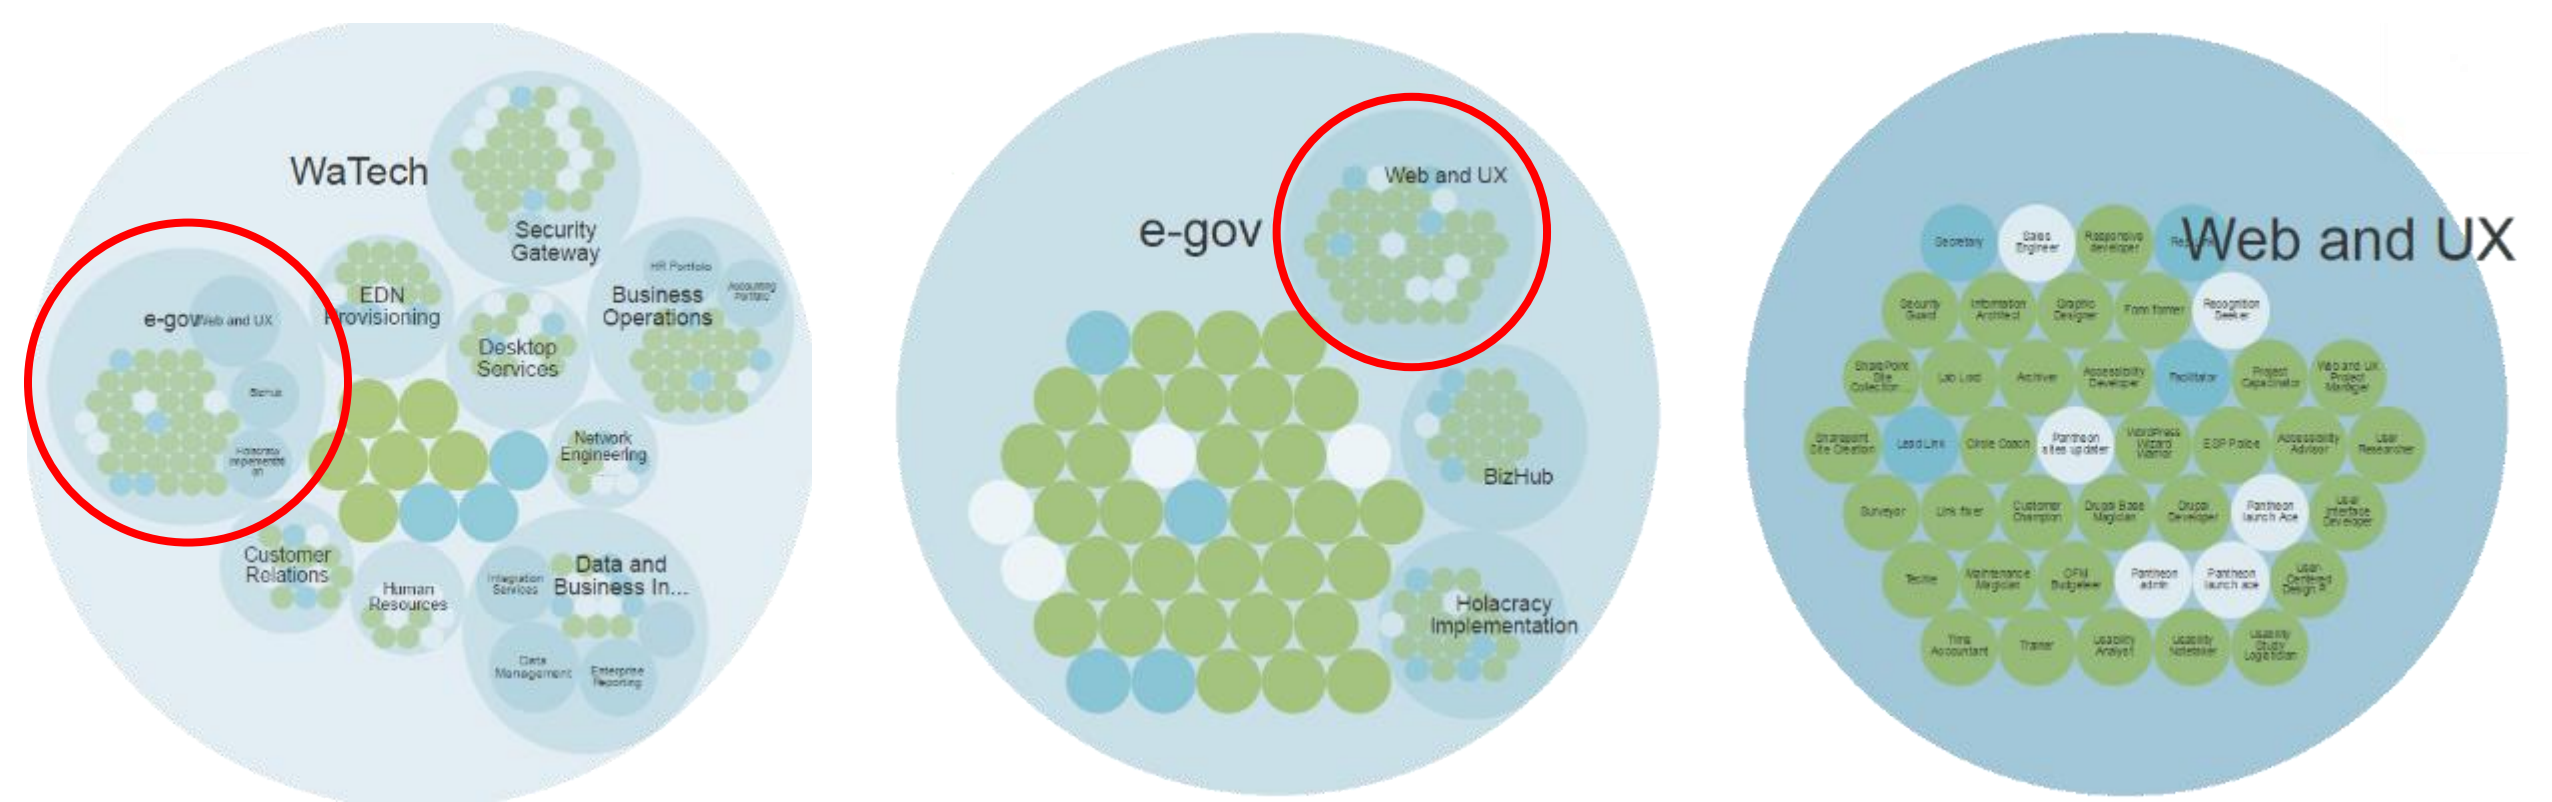

Set of rules

Distributes authority through roles

- Purpose: Technology that enables customers to transform their business
- Purpose: Transform citizen's experience with government
 - Purpose: Transform the citizens experience by providing mobile, modern, accessible, and usable websites and applications

What is Self-management?

- ▶ A different way to organize around work
- ▶ Role based
- ▶ Focus on purpose
- ▶ Authority is granted through roles instead of managers
- ▶ It's still about getting the work done

“Unfortunately, no one can be told what self-management is. You have to see it for yourself”

What has Washington been doing about it?

Empowerment

“If I need something done to make my job easier, I get advice and then I just do it.”

“I make decisions and take actions at work the same way I do at home. It’s natural.”

“After working this way, working in a hierarchy feels caveman-ish”

“Self-management has ruined me. I no longer want to work in an organization that practices hierarchy”

What does that mean for our future?

Self-management future in gov?

- ▶ Don't know...
- ▶ Goals
 - ▶ Get scientific data on the difference between hierarchy and self-management
 - ▶ Pose the question: Should we looking into self-management as a way to make government more effective for our citizens?

If we did move forward what would we need to do?

- ▶ We would want to implement at an organizational level
- ▶ Figure out if our class/comp system would need to change
- ▶ Identify how our HR processes (hiring, firing, leave approvals, PDPs, etc) would need to change

For now we'll have to wait to see the results

In the meantime, you could educate yourself on the concepts
